

“Our Volunteers - Health Outreach Project Volunteers Share Their Stories“

Dr. John Perri (on the right in San Gabriel, Guatemala 2018) is currently the Assistant Treasurer of Health Outreach.

" At the time this picture was taken I felt an enormous sense of pride for becoming involved with exceptional individuals. Physically, the work was exhausting. The conditions were severe. Mentally, it took a few days to accept the circumstances as they were and emotionally my heart would sink at the site each time we approached the clinic. Without these factors I would not have felt as fulfilled as I did.

I became involved with the organization through friendship with the organizers. This had been something I had wanted to do for sometime but put off. A personal life event spurred participation and I became hooked on this work.

I feel of sense of doing good simply through my association with this charity. I also feel that I have talents that can do good and finally it helps me place stresses in my life in perspective.

I believe work this this tends to attract certain individuals. These are individuals I chose to be around. They ultimately make you better as a human being.

I would love to see growth in the program. I would encourage colleagues to participate with their staff as a team. "
